SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 24 1862

"Wherefore the Change?"

The Advertiser tells us that the dispatches are producing great excitement among Union men. The editor however, insists that this excitement is caused by an item setting forth that several democratic members of Congress have issued an address to the people of the United States that "the party organization is a positive good and essential to the preservation of republican liberty." This item is not without interest, but the great excitement among the Union party grows out of the fact that the SLAVE HOLDERS' REBELLION IS NEAR ITS END—THAT ITS GRAVE IS DUG AND ITS SHROUD PREPARED. These are causes of excitement and rejoicing in the Union party. But of this scheme in favor of sustaining the organization of "the party" in the States—and which so much delights the Advertiser—what is it?

The Washington correspondent of the San Francisco Bulletin thus answers. He says that Vallandigham, Cox and others supporters of the old Buchanan party in its last days—

"Are looking to a reconstruction of that party upon its old basis, and of obtaining supremacy for it again in the national councils by availing of slavery as a political power. They start with the idea of capturing all the slave States as a basis (or rather as a party capital) upon which to commence business. These they expect to secure by opposing the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, as well as the President's emancipation policy, and probably, by endeavoring to secure terms in closing the present war such as shall save the rebel leaders from outlawry or ignominious death. If they can effect that, the prestige of 'democracy' is expected to enable them to carry a few States of the North for nominees dictated by the South. In short, they look to re-instatement in power, by consenting that slavery shall be re-installed in its domination over the country.

This, strange as it may seem, is substantially the programme for which the democratic magnates here are laboring. For one I believe they miscalculate the political temper of the North, and that they are destined to fall between two stools and perish. No party, henceforth, can enjoy any respectability in the North for a single hour on any platform or terms that will prove satisfactory to the Southern propagandists of slavery, who still insist that their local institution shall be nationalized and that freedom alone shall be sectional. The leaders of this scheme have yet to learn that henceforth Presidents are to be elected by the sentiment of the free States, and that it will be long before any President—no matter what his party nomenclature—can win success except on a platform that shall be satisfactory to the free States."

We see here, as elsewhere, the obvious design of the secessionists in endeavoring to reorganize the democratic party on the old basis of the doctrines of Breckinridge. They do not eschew a single principle they then defended, viz: the duty of Congress to protect slavery in the Territories, and the right of States to secede from the Union at pleasure. The hope is that the Union democrats of the North will accept of such an organization and that that by "bagging the whole rebel force in the South"—defending them, protecting them from the just punishment due to their treasonable and horrible atrocities against the Government and the people, they will be induced to act with these "democrats" in elections—receive a portion of the offices—perhaps with hands dyed in the blood of the people of the North be placed in the high offices of the Nation. Unquestionably the secesh members of the party would be gratified with these results—will labor for their accomplishment—and we know that here in Oregon nothing would rejoice the hearts of the secession candidates for State offices more than the consummation of this scheme. Manifestly the secesh party here and elsewhere wish to restore the same order of things in the Nation which has caused the bloody conflict through which we are now passing.

Will such a measure succeed? IT WILL NOT. Scarcely a family in the Loyal States can be found who have not some one of its members enlisted [illegible] in sustaining their Government. "THE VOICE OF OUR BROTHER'S BLOOD CRIES TO US FROM THE GROUND." The free people of this country will never, by any change [illegible] or combination of parties, submit to be ruled [illegible] or elect any rulers, not satisfactory to the free States. The country is to be ruled for the benefit of white men.

The facts thus presented exhibit the reason why the leaders of the secesh party here have uniformly sympathized with the rebellion in the South. They now see that the rebellion is to be put down. They will be bound to use their best efforts to save the rebels from punishment, either in person or estate. They hope by thus proving faithful to the South through all this rebellion to secure their votes in future elections; and thus will these Northern sympathizers again go into the field to extend and perpetuate slavery.

If the lessons the American people have received within the last few months and are now receiving, are not sufficient to prevent them from reinstating a state of affairs by the success of such a party scheme, and which has brought the existing calamities upon us, we may well believe that they are not capable of self government. We have no such apprehensions. We believe that there will be a re-organization of parties in the States, but in no event will it be upon the basis that the slave interest shall control the Government.

These views will show the necessity of all Union men in Oregon to stand to the nominations of the Union Convention. If they want to see in their day another rebellion, they will sustain the ticket got up by the sympathizers with rebellion. If they wish to see peace restored to the country permanently, and the Nation again go on in a prosperous career under our Constitution and Union, they will vote for the Union ticket. We shall see and know after the election who are Union men and who sympathize with rebellion.

SUGGESTION.—We have heard that Colonel Wm. H. Farrar is to speak on political matters next week. We suggest to him and to others whether it would not be well to defer it until the last night before the election, as from that gentleman's proneness to make sudden somersets, he might, if he spoke a few days before election, change again, and that would be awkward.

A LUCKY TYPO.—From a friend in the mines we learn that Thomas M. Mallory, a printer, who worked two years ago on the Advertiser, has struck a "fat spot" in the Florence City Mines. He takes out of his claim every day, from ten to forty ounces of dust.

The steamer Eliza Anderson whilst on her downward trip from Westminster to Victoria on the [illegible]th inst., struck a rock in Plumper Pass. Capt. Tom Wright was at the wheel at the time of the disaster. A gentleman who left Victoria three days after the accident, reports the steamer a total loss.

SAN FRANCISCO CITY ELECTION.—The election in San Francisco took place on the 20th, the day the steamer left. The Bulletin says:

"As we go to press there is every indication that the People's Party have elected their whole ticket."

THE FIRST FIGHT.—A Fort Yuma correspondent of the Alta gives the following account of the first encounter of the California army with the Arizona rebels, in which Lt. Barrett, of Captain McCleave's command, was killed:

News has reached us of the first encounter between our soldiers and the Texans. It appears that Capt. Calloway was advised of the fact that the enemy had posted a picket guard to watch the road leading to Tucson, and he accordingly, on or about the 16th or 17th inst., sent Lieut. Barrett, of Co. A, 1st Cavalry California Volunteers with twelve men, to cut off or drive in the enemy's picket. Lieut. Barrett managed to get between Tucson and the picket, which was posted in a chapparal, and then attempted to drive the picket forward on Capt. Calloway's command. In endeavoring to execute this manœuvre he unwisely entered the chapparal mounted, whilst the enemy watched his advance from their covert. At the first discharge the gallant Barrett was killed, with one of his men, and another was mortally wounded. Nevertheless, the brave fellows who remained dismounted and gave the enemy a taste of their quality, killing three, wounding three and taking three prisoners, besides capturing all the enemy's stores, camp and garrison equipage, etc. The rebels numbered 16, and our forces but 12 men. Our loss was three killed, including Barrett, and three wounded. This is the first conflict that has occurred between California troops proper and the rebels. There is every reason to believe that we will have hot work, sharp work and plenty of it, before long. The California troops will probably do the best fighting in the contest, as the rebels are being gradually driven southward upon the position they must sooner or later occupy.

THE FIRST DETACHED LOCOMOTIVE.—The Vulcan Foundry has just completed the first detached locomotive ever built in California. It is intended for service in Oregon, and will be shipped for its destination on Tuesday next. The capacity of the engine is thirty horse power, and it is capable of drawing 40 tons. The driving wheels are 54 inches in diameter and the cylinder has a 9 inch bore and 18 inch stroke. It can with safety carry a pressure of 120 lbs. of steam, although but about 110 lbs. will be necessary for the purpose intended. It was designed by C. W. Stevens, and for strength and exterior finish will compare well with those manufactured and used at the East. Everything about it is of California manufacture, except the flues, which even in the Eastern States are imported.—San Francisco Bulletin.

RUSSELL TELLS THE TRUTH ONCE.—In a communication to the London Times, dated Washington March 11th, he said:

"Gen. McClellan can never lose the credit of having taken the volunteer masses in hand and formed them into an army, of inspiring them with confidence, and instilling into them the principles of soldierly life and discipline; and whatever comes, he has earned and deserved, whether he gets it or not, the praise and gratitude of his fellow countrymen for doing that which, to be fully understood in all its magnitude, ought to be witnessed by one who beheld Washington in the week of July, and who can now ride through its streets or visit the camps on the Potomac."

CAIRO, May 1[illegible].—Deserters who have arrived at the [illegible] report the rebels busily engaged in repairing the damages sustained during the naval engagement of Saturday last (the 10th). The rebel fleet is said not to have been [illegible] as reported.

From Pittsburg Landing we have nothing of a positive character. Our army is advancing slowly [illegible]. All Gen. Halleck's movements are predicated upon the supposition that the enemy are making forced [illegible] that they will make a stand at headquarters. The number of the enemy is estimated at 170,000. Grand Junction is being fortified by Beauregard with the evident intention of falling back there, if beaten at Corinth.

A dispatch from [illegible] Monterey [illegible] yesterday [illegible] had a skirmish with the rebel pickets on the right wing on the [illegible], killing and wounding [illegible] and capturing [illegible]. Our loss was 2. The party went within half a mile of the rebel battery, just outside of the enemy's entrenchments.

Gen. Halleck moves his camp [illegible] miles from here to-day to the front. It is believed an engagement will come off next week.

The Memphis Appeal of the 11th says the Federal fleet had returned from Natchez to New Orleans. It declares the only terms on which the South can accept peace is the recognition of their independence not only of the cotton States, but all the border States whose people desire [illegible] with the [illegible].

A dispatch from Little Rock says that the Federal force under Gen. Curtis had commenced its march upon the Capital of Arkansas. Gen. Steele was marching on the same place from Pocahontas.

The same paper (the Appeal) contains official [illegible] Ark., and says that the Federals had taken Augusta and all the cotton in the [illegible].

A dispatch from Washington states that matters in the department of the Rappahannock remain unchanged. The enemy's pickets are stationed five miles beyond Fredericksburg. Several residents of Fredericksburg have been arrested for treason and sent to Washington for confinement.

CHICAGO, May 1[illegible].—New York advices per steamer Catawba state that Gen. Hunter has issued a proclamation freeing the slaves in his department. It was [illegible] organizing a negro brigade, and directed officers to [illegible] in the use of arms.

A dispatch from Washington of Wednesday (the 14th) says that McClellan telegraphed to the War Department that Commander Rodgers with the gunboats in the James river passed Little Brandon on the 11th, and two batteries of ten guns each were discovered on the south side of the river, one opposite the mouth of Warwick creek, and the other [illegible] from Mulberry Point. Between the latter, the rebel gunboats Jamestown and Yorktown lay. Commander Rodgers offered battle, but the gunboats moved off. He silenced one battery and ran past the other.

A dispatch from Washington states that on the 12th the President issued a proclamation declaring that the blockade of the ports of Beaufort, Port Royal and New Orleans shall so far cease, from 1st June next, that commercial intercourse, except as to that contraband of war, may from that time be carried on, subject to the laws of the United States. Postal arrangements with Norfolk will also be re-established.

In the Senate on the 13th Gen. McDougal from the Special Committee reported back the Pacific Railroad bill and moved it be made the special order for the 15th. The motion was rejected by 1[illegible] to 19.

The Indian Appropriation bill was taken up [illegible]

CITY.

THE MORNING OREGONIAN has a larger SUBSCRIPTION LIST than any other Daily published in this City.

THE DAILY OREGONIAN may be had at the Franklin Book Store, opposite the Post Office.

QUICK PASSAGES — Considerable interest is manifested at the present time, by the friends of the steamships Sierra Nevada and Brother Jonathan as to which can make the fastest time between this port and San Francisco. We give the memorandum of the Brother Jonathan and the time occupied by the Sierra Nevada on her last trip to this port.

The Brother Jonathan brings 300 tons freight and 309 passengers, and has made the quickest time on record — 64 hours and 40 minutes from dock to dock, running time, or 74 hours 10 minutes including all stoppages, say 3½ hours at the bar and 1 hour at Astoria. Beat it, Mr Sierra Nevada, if you can, or "any other man," and take the horns. She made the run down to San Francisco in [illegible] hours from dock to dock.

The Sierra Nevada left San Francisco May [illegible] at 5.20 P M, stopped at Trinidad and [illegible] passengers, had head winds the whole passage, and arrived at Portland 4 30 P M [illegible], making the trip in 70 hours and 10 minutes.

The Pacific arrived in San Francisco on the [illegible] inst, making the trip from dock to dock in the short space of 60½ hours.

NO MORE BLOCKADES — The City Draymen [illegible] day, agreed with Mayor Farrar that [illegible] would not commence hauling freight to the Columbia River steamers before the hour of [illegible] A. M., and then they would fall into [illegible] as to leave a good passage way for [illegible] and the Engines in the case of [illegible].

[illegible] WORKING — We noticed quite a [illegible] of our citizens removing their [illegible] and other nuisances yesterday, in [illegible] with the ordinance passed by the [illegible] Common Council on Wednesday.

[illegible] — The fast sailing steamer Brother [illegible], S. I. DeWolfe, commander, is advertised to sail for San Francisco direct, this [illegible].

[illegible] to Mr McCormick, of the Frank[lin Book] Store, Wells, Fargo & Co and Capt [illegible], for files of papers.

[illegible] — A man by the name of John [illegible] entered the house of Dr Wilson, during [his] absence and frightened the inmates [illegible]. Mr Tracy, who happened to [be near], arrested the fellow and brought [him before] the Recorder, when it appeared [he] was insane. He was accordingly [committed to] jail, to await the action of his friends, [who] promise to take him away to day.

[illegible] ALSO — A gentleman caught seve[ral] "Trout" while sitting in a rocking [chair on] the rear porch of the Metropolis [on Tues]day.

[illegible] HONOR — We are authorized [to state th]at Mr. C. W. Burrage declines hav[ing his name] used on the Independent Union [ticket for] the office of County Surveyor. He [is a] candidate for the same office on [the] Union Ticket, and will depend [on the] Union vote.

[illegible] POLE — In compliance with [a resolution] of the Common Council, Marshal [illegible] has been endeavoring to reeve the [halyards] in the Flag Staff on the Public [Square]. Several attempts were made to [illegible], but from its great height was [imposs]ible — the best man not getting [within] [illegible] feet of the Cap of Liberty. Yes[terday the] topmast was lowered and to-day [our] Ensign will be floating proudly [from the] highest mast in our free city.

[San] Francisco Markets.

[illegible] of bagging material are in re[quest at] high figures. A better demand is [noted] for domestic liquors. Costa Rica [coffee in] request, with sales at full figures. [illegible] in fair demand. Candles are firm. [illegible] are more inquired for, while trade [is] improving under the influence of [the] country demand for general mer[chandise].

[There is] a continued good demand for su[gar], with round sales at advanced [rates]. [illegible] 8000 sacks wheat of low grades [were] sold at a decline.

[Advices] from Marysville state that the bulk [of the] wool crop has already found its way [to market], and will soon be shipped. The wool [of the] [nor]thern portion of the State has not [yet made] its appearance, the season being so cold [and late] that wool growers had to delay [shearing] to a much later period than usual.

The Two Sisters

BY NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE.

[illegible]

"For heaven's sake, what news do you bring?" asked Margaret.

"There has been an express through the town within this half hour," said the good man Parker, "travelling from the westward jurisdiction, with letters from the Governor and Council. He tarried at my house to refresh himself with a drop and morsel, and I asked him what tidings on the frontiers. He told me we had the better in the skirmish you wot of, and that thirteen men reported slain, are well and sound, and your husband among them. Besides, he is appointed one of the escort to bring the captivated Frenchers and Indians home to the province jail. I judged you wouldn't mind being broke of your rest, and so I stepped over to tell you. Good night."

So saying, the honest man departed, and the lantern gleamed along the street, bringing to view indistinct shapes of things, and the fragments of a world, like order glimmering through a chaos, or memory roaming over the past. But Margaret staid not to watch those picturesque effects. Joy flashed into her heart, and lighted it up at once, and with winged steps she flew to the bedside of her sister. She paused, however, at the door of her chamber, while a thought of pain broke upon her.

"Poor Mary," she said to herself. "Shall I awaken her to feel her sorrow sharpened by my happiness? No, I will keep it within my own bosom till to-morrow."

She approached the bed to see if Mary's sleep was peaceful. Her face was turned partly upward to the pillow, and had been hidden there to weep, but a look of motionless contentment was visible upon it, as if her heart, like a deep lake, had become calm because its grief was sunk down so far within. Happy is it, and strange, that the lighter sorrows are those from which dreams are chiefly fabricated. Margaret shrunk from disturbing her sister-in-law, and felt as if her own better fortune had rendered her involuntarily unfaithful, as if altered and diminished affection must be the consequence of the disclosure she had to make. With a sudden step she turned away. But joy could not be repressed, even by the circumstances that would have excited heavy grief at another moment. Her mind was thronged with delightful thoughts, till sleep stole in and transformed them into visions more delightful and more like the breath of winter (but a cold comparison,) working fantastic tracery on the window.

When the night was far advanced, Mary woke with a sudden start. A vivid dream had latterly involved her in its unreal life, of which, however, she could only remember that it had been broken in upon at its most interesting point. For a little time slumber hung about her like a morning mist, hindering her from perceiving the distinct outline of her situation. She listened with imperfect consciousness to two or three volleys of rapid and eager knocking; at first she deemed the noise a matter of course, like the breath she drew; next it appeared a thing in which she had no concern, and lastly she became aware that it was a summons necessary to be obeyed. At the same moment a pang of recollection darted into her mind, the pall of sleep was thrown back from the face of grief, the dim light of the chamber, and objects therein revealed, retained all her suspended ideas, and restored them as soon as she unclosed her eyes. Again there was a quick peal upon the street door. Fearing that her sister would also be disturbed, Mary wrapped herself in a cloak and hood, took the lamp from the hearth, and hastened to the window. By some accident it had been left unclosed, and yielded easily to the hand.

Mary leaned from the window, but did not speak.

"Who's there?" she finally asked, trembling as she looked forth.

The storm was over and the moon was up; it shone upon broken clouds above, and below upon houses black with moisure, and upon little lakes of fallen rain, curling with silver beneath the quick enchantment of a breeze. A young man in sailor's dress, wet as if he had come out of the depths of the sea, stood alone under the window. Mary recognized him as one whose livelihood was gained by short voyages on the coast; nor did she forget that, previous to her marriage, he had been an unsuccessful wooer of her hand.

"What do you seek here, Stephen?"

"Cheer up, Mary, for I seek to comfort you," answered the rejected lover. "You must know I got home ten minutes ago, and the first thing my mother told me was about your husband; so, without saying a word to the old woman, I clapped on my hat and ran out of the house. I couldn't have slept a wink before speaking to you, Mary, for the sake of olden times."

"Stephen, I thought better of you," exclaimed the widow, with gushing tears, and preparing to close the lattice. For she was not a whit inclined to imitate the first wife of Zadig.

"But stop and hear my story out," cried the young sailor. "I tell you we spoke a brig yesterday afternoon, bound in from old England—and whom do you think I saw on the deck, well and hearty, only a bit thinner than he was five months ago?

"Why, it was your husband himself," continued the generous seaman. "He and three others saved themselves on a spar when the vessel turned bottom upwards. The brig will float into the bay by daylight with this wind, and you will see him here to-morrow. There is the comfort I bring to you, Mary, so good night."

He hurried away, while Mary watched him with a doubt of waking reality, that seemed stronger or weaker as he alternately entered the shade of the houses or emerged into the broad streaks of moonlight. Gradually, however, a flood of conviction swelled into her heart, in strength enough to overwhelm her, had its increase been more abrupt. Her first impulse was to arouse her sister-in-law, and communicate the new-born gladness. She opened the chamber door, which had been closed in the night, and was about to lay her hand on the slumberer's shoulder. But then she remembered that Margaret would awake to thoughts of death and woe, rendered none the less bitter by the thoughts of her felicity. She suffered the rays of the lamp to fall on the unconscious form of the bereaved one. Margaret lay in unquiet sleep, and the drapery was displaced around her; her young cheeks rosy-tinted, lips half opened in a vivid smile, an expression of joy, debarred its passage by her sealed eyelids, struggled forth like incense from her whole countenance.

"My poor sister, you will awaken too soon from the happy dream," thought Mary.

Before retiring, she sat down the lamp and endeavored to arrange the bed clothes so that the chill air might do no harm to the feverish slumberer. But her hands trembled against Margaret's neck, a tear fell upon her cheek, and she suddenly awoke. Their mutual joy was made known, and they wept in each other's arms.

FAMILY

SEWING MACHINES

ARE UNEQUALLED BY ANY FOR

BEAUTY AND SIMPLICITY OF CONSTRUCTION

—AND—

Efficiency in Working.

A GOOD SEWING MACHINE

SHOULD BE WELL MADE, simple in its construction and easily kept in order; should make a tight lock-stitch alike on both sides of the material, and should sew any and all materials that can be sewed.

It should be able to use cotton, thread or silk directly from the spool, and to sew from coarse to fine, and from thick to thin, with rapidity and without changing the tension. It should also be able to make the tension greater or less on both the under and upper threads and with uniformity, and should have a straight needle, curved ones being liable to break.

The needle should have a perpendicular motion—this is absolutely necessary for heavy work.

It should be able to bind with a binder, hem with a hemmer, should stitch, fell, run and gather, and should be always ready to work.

It should be capable of using the same size thread on both sides of the work, and of using different colored thread or silk above or below to correspond with any two colors of cloth to be united.

It should be able to make a long or short stitch, and to fasten off the seam and commence sewing tightly at the first stitch, and to run easily, and make but little noise.

It should have a wheel feed; no others are in constant contact with the work.

It should not be liable to get out of order, neither should it require a screw driver or wrench to set the needle.

It should not be liable to oil the operator's dress.

It should not form a ridge on the under side nor ravel.

The undersigned are General Agents for the general superintendence of these unrivalled machines for Pacific States and Western Coast of Mexico.
